Who Has Seen The Wind

Christina Georgina Rossetti
1830-1894

Who has seen the wind? 1
Neither I nor you. 2
But when the leaves hang trembling, 3
The wind is passing through. 4

Who has seen the wind? 5
Neither you nor I. 6
But when the trees bow down their heads, 7
The wind is passing by. 8

1872

Perhaps if Ms. Rossetti had actually ever beheld a windmill in dreary old 19th century London, she would have written a longer poem...

Longer tributes to windmills proper have been penned by Hans Christian Andersen (The Windmill – Veirmollen – 1865), Robert Bridges (The Windmill – 1890), and contemporary poet, Yvonne Hollenbeck (A Windmill On The Prairie – 2002); also Dusty Springfield's soulful theme from "The Thomas Crown Affair" – The Windmills Of Your Mind.

This collection of "fair weather" wind engine images is dedicated to all who have seen the wind at playful work, and to those who love and preserve the mills everywhere – especially Frank Medina, "King of the Windmills".
